Permaculture gardening is a unique water conservation method used to capture and store hill land runoff, rain runoff, and air precipitation, i.e.: fog and mist, that can be used to water throughout the garden. The design for this garden has been completed by Diane Kennedy the designer and owner of Finch Frolic Permaculture Garden in Fallbrook, a known leader in Permaculture Pollinator gardening. Funding will secure local services needed to develop the 1/3-acre plot that will become the Permaculture Pollinator Garden, and pay for services and equipment needed to grade, install walkways, water capture basins and preparation of the land for planting.
